Monthly Trade Analysis

Follow Trade Trends and Identify Supply Sources and Target Markets.

Monthly Trade Analysis tracks:

- Country and region net trade balances and transaction prices
- Country and region Transaction prices, FOB and CIF
- Bilateral trade volumes (imports and exports) and transaction prices
- Data Update Record and filing coverage

Each monthly release covers the previous full calendar year and available current-year YTD. Reconciled volumes and unfiltered customs-derived prices support market monitoring, short-term trade planning and price-setting reviews.

Executive Overview

The Executive Overview brings together the report's principal trade developments, the monthly exports and imports chart by region and the latest filing position. The country sections provide the evidence for commercial review.

Monthly Exports and Imports by Region

The chart shows monthly exports above zero and imports below, by region, with the previous year beside the current year. It helps identify potential supplier and market regions. Changes in volumes may indicate short-term trade developments, but reporting coverage and estimated prior-year monthly allocations must be considered before drawing conclusions.

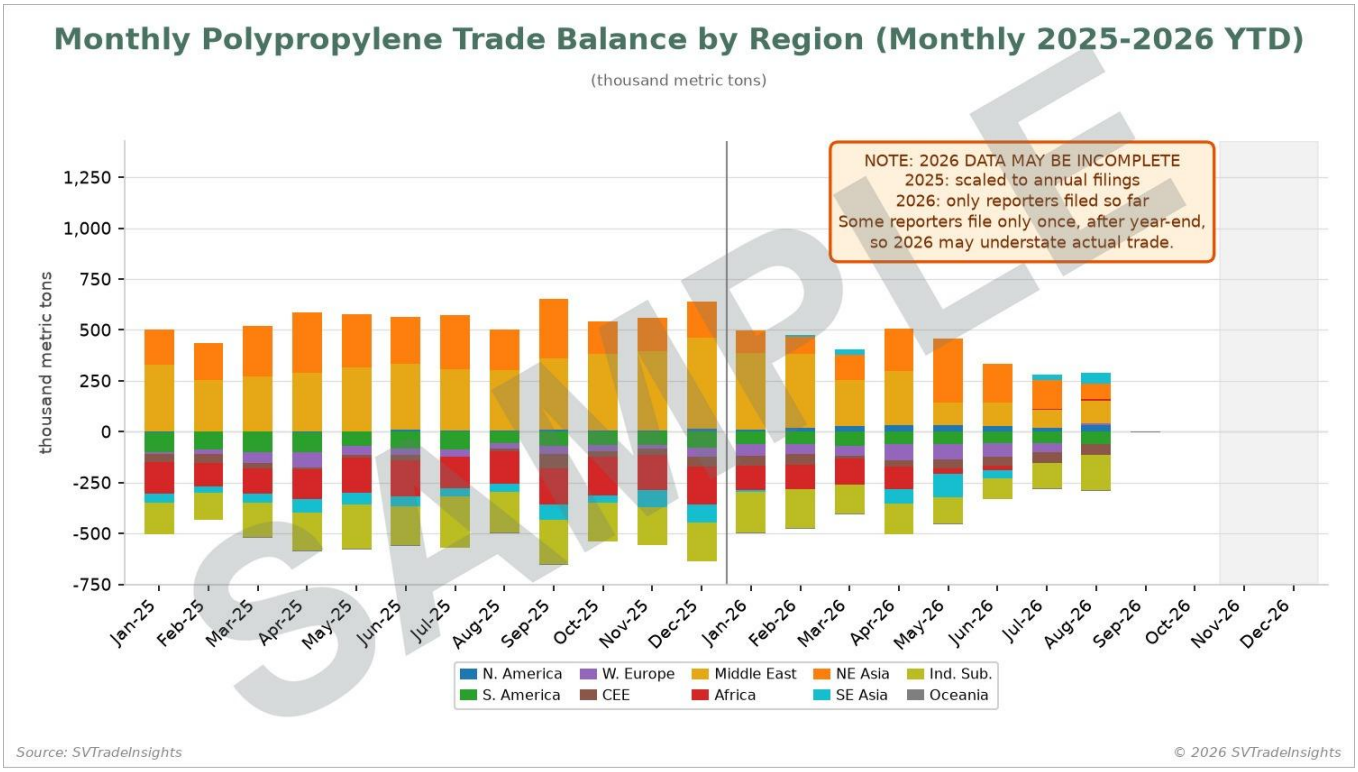
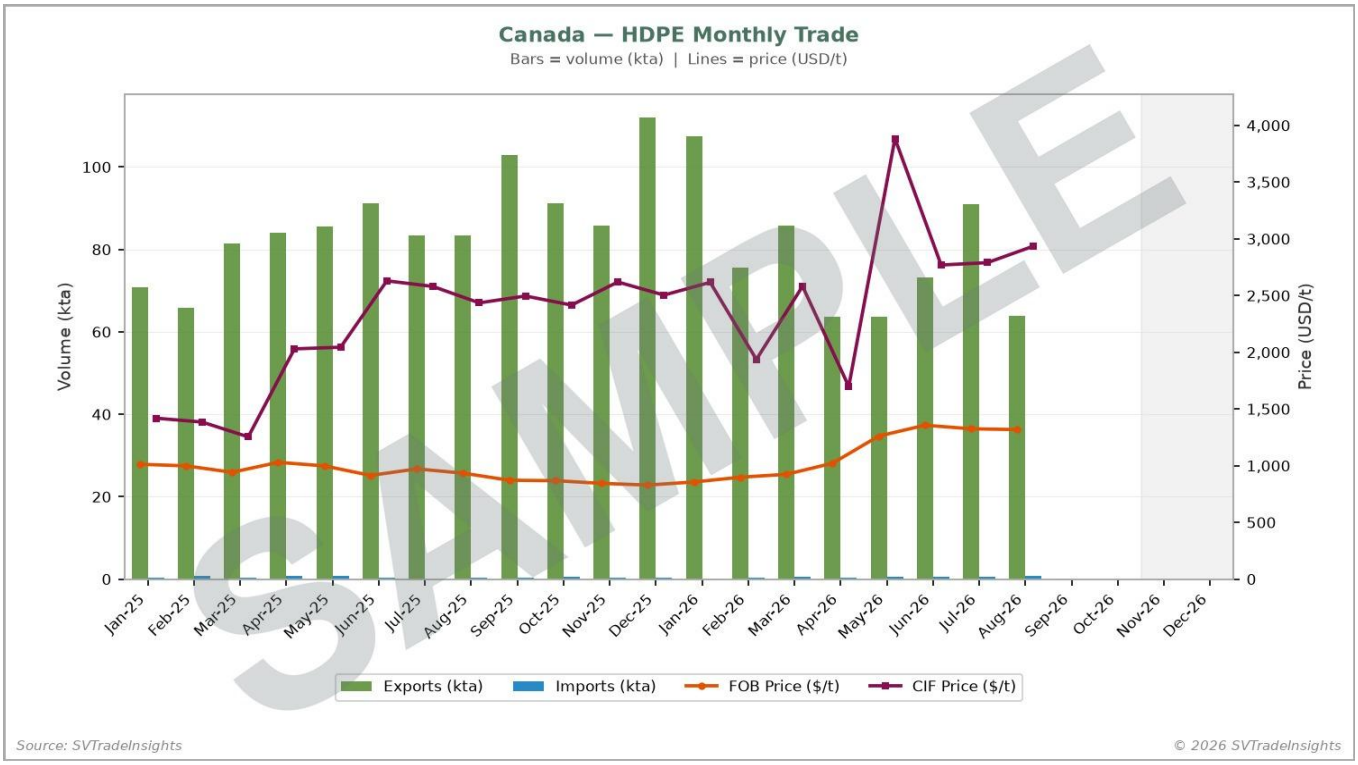
Regional Trade Balance

Regional Trade Balance shows net trade positions by region across the monthly series, alongside the exports and imports view in the Executive Overview. It supports assessment of potential short-term trade developments when changes in reporting coverage are considered.



Monthly Trade Volumes and Prices by Country

Monthly Trade Volumes and Prices by Country highlights the overall country export and import quantities and available FOB/CIF transaction prices. The charts retain the previous full year and available current-year history for the report's selected recent filers.



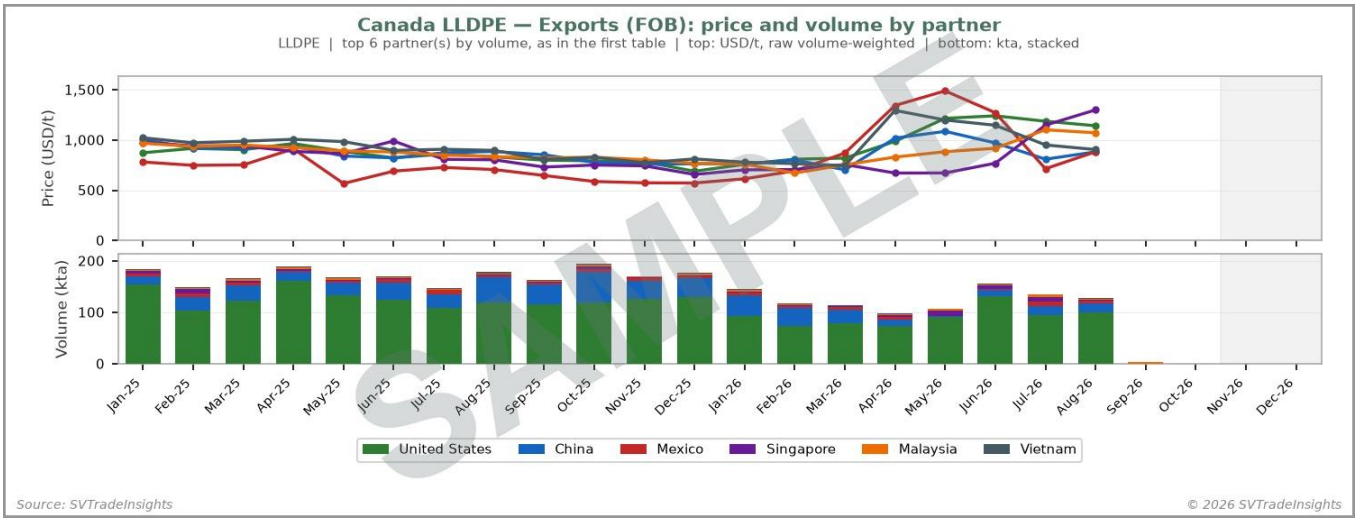
SAMPLE

Transaction Prices and Volumes

Within the country analysis, Transaction Prices and Volumes compares reconciled quantities with unfiltered, volume-weighted customs-derived unit values for selected partners. These histories help assess price trends and identify potential supplier and market countries for closer review.

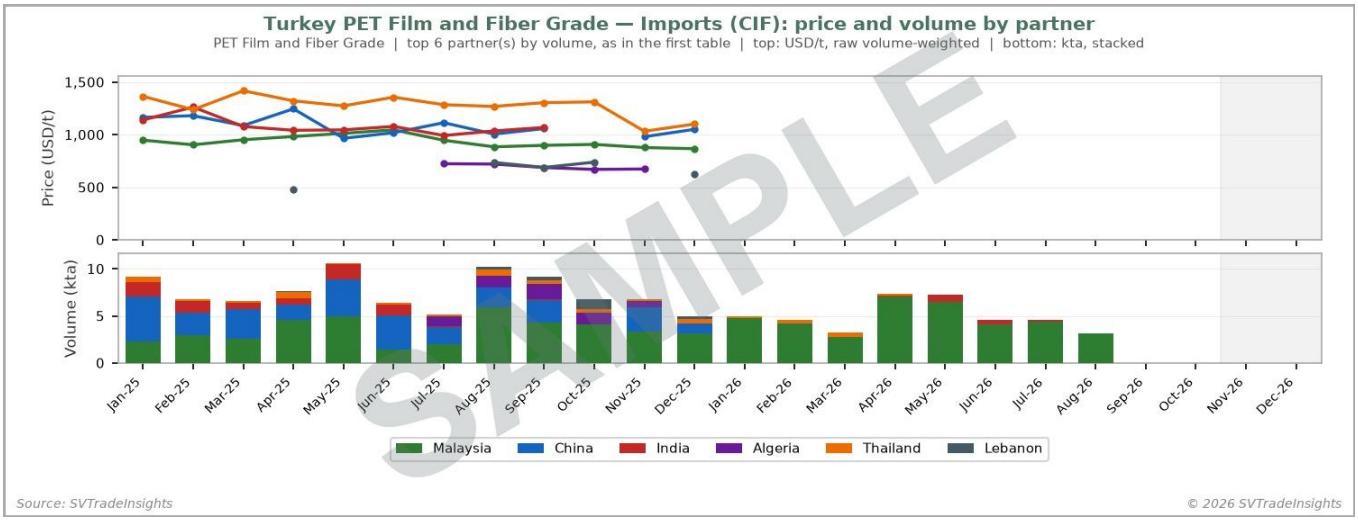
Export transaction prices and volumes by partner

Selected export-partner charts combine reconciled volumes with unfiltered FOB prices, allowing comparisons of destination countries, recorded price patterns and trade volumes.



Import transaction prices and volumes by partner

Selected import-partner charts combine reconciled volumes with unfiltered CIF prices, allowing comparisons of supplying countries, recorded price patterns and trade volumes.



A volume bar can remain available when no usable value was reported to calculate a price. Blank prices are unavailable, not zero. Shipment size, timing and transaction mix matter when assessing a movement; these customs unit values are not live offers.

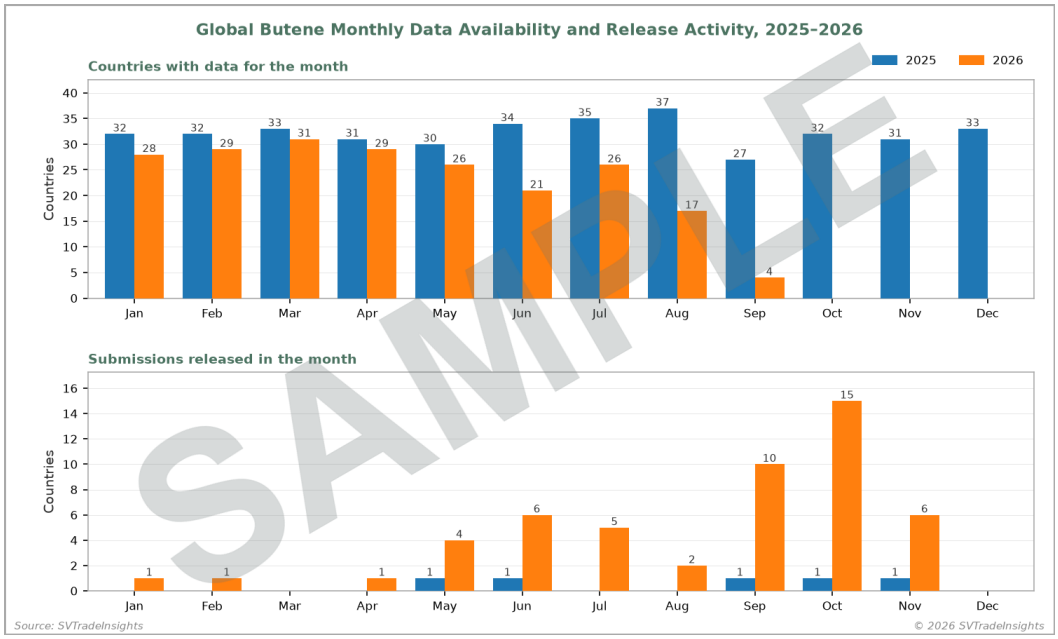
Reporting Coverage

The Data Update Record and its availability summary distinguish the trade months covered from the months in which submissions were released. This makes the reporting position visible before readers compare recent trade movements or transaction prices.



Separate new filings from new trade evidence

The chart shows both the number of countries with data for a trade month and the number releasing submissions in a filing month. A new submission may still cover an earlier trading period; its release date alone does not establish how current the underlying observations are.

Compare periods with coverage in view

Matching calendar months is a useful starting point, but country coverage can differ. Check the update record before treating a lower reported total as weaker demand or a smaller trade opportunity.

Use the report and Excel together

Country pages focus on reporters releasing data within the most recent three-month filing window. The Excel deliverable also contains countries outside that window, giving users the wider available dataset for their own monitoring.

COUNTRY ANALYSIS IN THE REPORT

3-month filing window

Reporters who released data in the latest filing month or either of the two previous months.

The filing window selects reporters for the country pages, including partner charts. Historical coverage is not limited to those three filing months.

Your 12-month subscription includes 12 monthly releases. A new report and updated Excel datasets are uploaded online each month. The release frequency differs from historical coverage: each issue contains the previous full year and available current YTD; the three-month filing window selects countries for detailed PDF pages. Subscriptions renew yearly until cancelled; we will email you before each renewal to remind you of the renewal date.

Use the report and data together

Use the report contents to identify trade developments worth reviewing. Use the accompanying Excel datasets to examine country, regional and bilateral evidence in more detail, checking the periods available for each series.

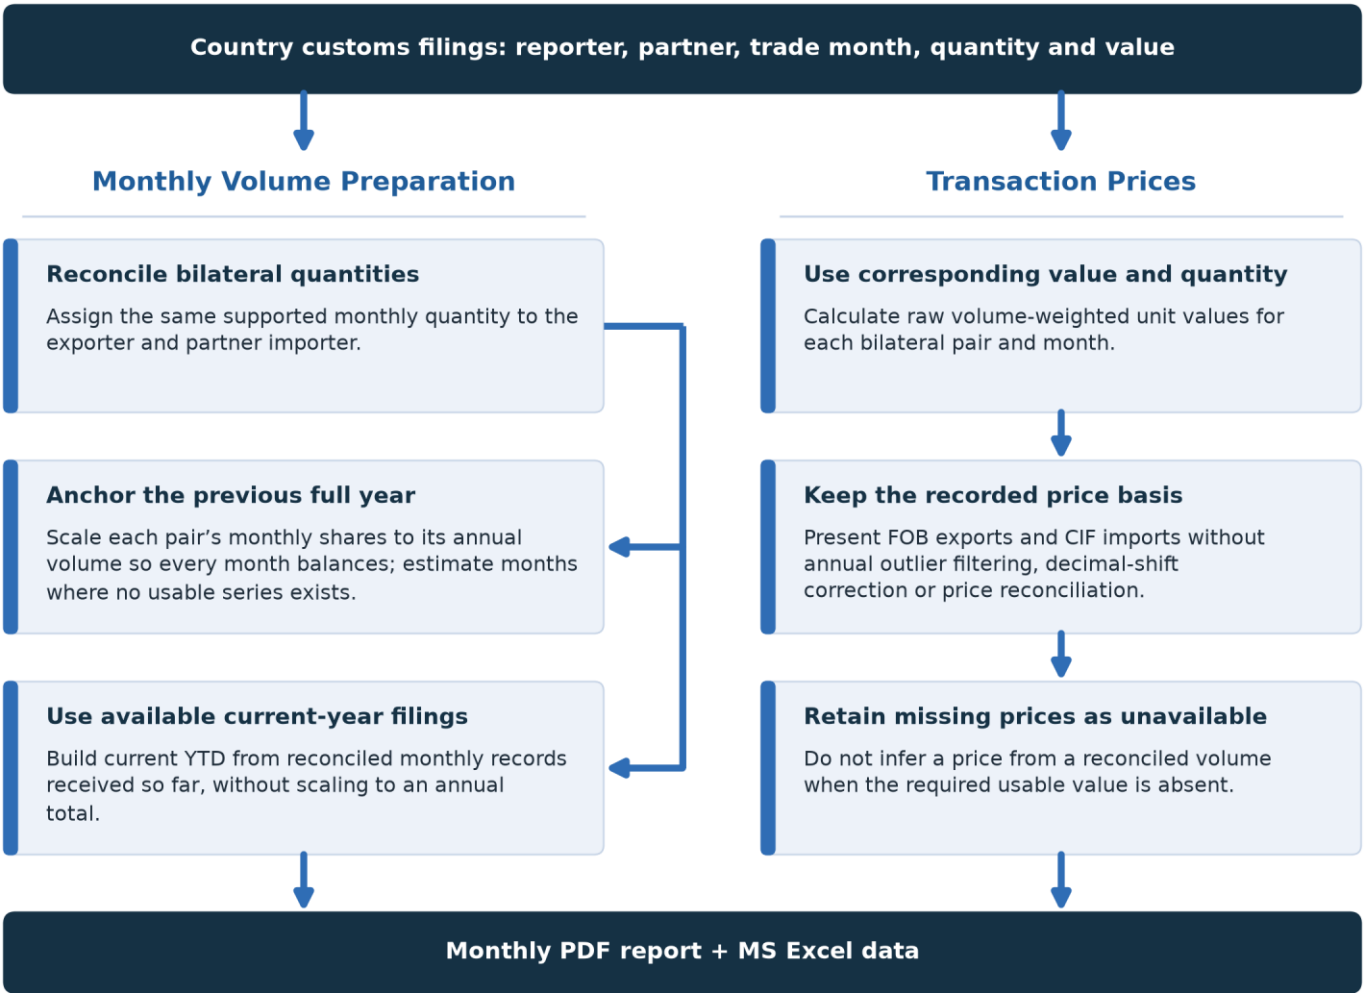
Methodology

Monthly Volume Preparation and Transaction Prices follow separate paths. Reconciled bilateral quantities create a consistent trade record. Monthly customs-derived prices remain unfiltered so readers can see recorded price movements, including unusual observations. These values may reflect reporting errors or transaction differences and should be reviewed alongside trade volumes and filing coverage.



Coverage and Interpretation

Prior-year allocations without a usable bilateral monthly series use the exporter's broader monthly pattern, then the importer's pattern, or an equal allocation across the year. These estimates are made to be representative of the missing data; they do not establish observed month-to-month movements.

Current-year totals remain incomplete until additional reporters file. Reporting lags and small shipments can affect comparisons and unit values; the Data Update Record and partner volumes provide essential context.

Publication timing

The complete monthly report and Excel package is published before the final week of each month and remains unchanged during the final seven calendar days. Later filings are included in the next edition.
